Defendants Lose Motion to Bring Karpis Into Court

Overruled on Their Demand That Government Produce Him

TRIAL UNDER WAY

Seven Hot Springs Citizens Accused of Harboring Enemy No. 1

LITTLE ROCK—Defense counsel for seven Hot Springs residents on trial in federal court here on a charge of conspiring to harbor Alvin Karpis moved unsuccessfully Wednesday to have the government produce the former public enemy No. 1 in court.

TRIAL IS BEGUN

LITTLE ROCK—The government charged before a jury of 10 men and two women in United States District Court Tuesday that Alvin Karpis, once-time Public Enemy No. 1, and his lieutenants moved freely in and out of Hot Springs between June 1, 1935 and April 1, 1937, with the protection of three former police officials and with the full knowledge of four other persons indicted on charges of conspiracy to harbor the gangster.

Defense lawyers countered with the assertion that no "credible witnesses" would connect the seven defendants with any harboring conspiracy. They said their testimony would prove "the streets of Hot Springs were filled with agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation" during that period, and that these agents had just as good an opportunity to arrest Karpis as the Hot Springs officers.

The first day of the trial was given over to selection of a jury and opening statements by lawyers. Taking of testimony will begin at 10 Wednesday morning. The trial is expected to last throughout the week. Remainder of the jury panel was excused by Federal Judge Trimble until Monday morning.

Hot Springs Several references were made by lawyers for both sides during the day to the city administration of Hot Springs.

W. Henry Latham, Little Rock lawyer for Mrs. A. C. Dyer, operator of a boat landing near Hot Springs, and Morris Loftis, co-owner of the boat landing, testified that E. B. I. agents had told his client "they wanted Leo McLaughlin, Judge Ledgerwood and those other officers in Hot Springs. We don't want small fry like you."

In selection of the jury, Mr. Isgrig asked prospective jurors if they were friendly with or had any business dealings with the city administration. Grover T. Owens, one of six defense lawyers, objected on the grounds that the city administration was not at trial.

In one instance, Mr. Isgrig asked a prospective juror whether he could return a verdict of guilty without being embarrassed in dealings with the city administration.

Answering objections by Mr. Owens that this had no bearing on the case, Mr. Isgrig replied: "It does have a bearing on this case. We must know if he would be absolutely free to decide."

The jury of 10 men and two women, plus two women alternates, was completed at 1:15 p. m. after three and a half hours.

Conspiracy Charges Mr. Isgrig proceeded to outline conspiracy indictments returned by a Federal Grand Jury last spring against Herbert (Dutch) Akers, former Hot Springs chief of detectives.

Joseph Wahlen, former police chief, Cecil Brock, former police lieutenant, John Stover, manager of the Hot Springs airport.

Mrs. Grace Goldstein, operator of a Hot Springs hotel.

Connie Morris, sweetheart of Fred Hunter, Karpis' lieutenant, was indicted on the same charge. She pleaded guilty and is serving a year and a day in a federal prison. She is expected to testify for the government.

The district attorney said Karpis and Hunter first came to Hot Springs about June 1, 1935, after having been indicted by a federal Grand Jury in St. Paul, Minn., on a charge of kidnapping Edward George Bremer, wealthy St. Paul brewer and collecting a $200,000 ransom.

He recalled that the two gangsters made headquarters at Grace Goldstein's hotel on Central avenue, going to and from the hotel in an automobile bearing a Kentucky license plate. "Karpis and Hunter drove openly about the city streets with Grace and her girls," he said. "They often dined with them and were at perfect liberty, going and coming as they pleased."

The gangsters first rented a cottage near Carpenter dam, the district attorney said, but later moved to Mrs. Dyer's cabin where they employed servants and moved back and forth for months.

Testing Station Here to Re-open Friday Morning

City Council Orders Tests of Cars Following Court Decision

COURTHOUSE CASE

Council Appropriates $1,900 to Pay for Contested Election

The city council Tuesday night ordered the re-opening of the automobile testing station at Fair park. The station is to open this Friday after being closed several weeks pending a decision in the Arkansas supreme court, brought from Union county.

The high tribunal Monday of this week handed down its decision which prohibited Chancellor Walker Smith of Union county from restraining enforcement of the auto-testing provisions of Arkansas' model traffic code.

Union chancery over two months ago stopped enforcement of the auto-testing law with a temporary injunction against Superintendent Albright of the state police force, and all other law enforcement officers in the station.

To Pay Court Cost

The council unanimously adopted a motion by Alderman Carter Johnson to pay the Hope Chamber of Commerce $1,900 for expenses of conducting the recent courthouse election contest case in circuit court here.

The appropriation is for fees to six attorneys, court costs and other expense incurred during the recent hearings. Attorneys representing Hope in the case were E. F. McFaddin, Royce Weisenberger, Steve Carrigan, Lawson Glover, Albert Graves and Talbot Feild.

Other business:

The council passed a motion by Alderman Young to pay half the cost of five police uniforms. The other half is to be paid by the policeman.

The council adopted a motion by Alderman Carter Johnson to continue membership in the Arkansas Municipal League and authorized payment of dues to the league for the year ending September 1, 1939.

Proposal Heard

A representative of the Rural Electrical Administration, Washington, D. C., appeared before the council and asked that the city furnish prospective REA customers electricity at practically wholesale cost.

After a short discussion, with slim prospects of the council granting such a request, the group adopted a motion by Alderman Hamilton referring the matter to the water and light committee with the request to draw up a rate schedule for sale of electricity at the switchboard.

Dr. P. B. Carrigan, city health physician, reported several complaints of sewer odors arising on Third street between Pine and Hervey streets. The street department was ordered to investigate and correct the situation.

Street Paving Plan

Property owners wishing pavement now have an opportunity to take advantage of a plan being offered by the city government.

The city will furnish two-thirds of the cost of materials, the property owner the other third. The WPA will furnish the labor free.

For estimates on pavement, property owners may contact Walter Locke, WPA construction supervisor, or R. P. Bowen, secretary of the Hope chamber of commerce.

Bobcat B Team to Play Texarkana

First-String Squad Drills for Nashville Invasion Friday

Assistant Coach Bill Brasher will take the Hope High School B team to Texarkana Thursday afternoon for a football clash with the Texarkana, (Texas), B team at Grim field. The contest begins at 4 p. m.

It will be the second contest for the Hope second-string team, having played Blevins at Blevins in the first game.

Meantime, Coach Foy Hammons and his squad of first-stringers prepared for the Nashville invasion Friday night. Hammons said at noon Wednesday that Tackle Norman Green was showing improvement and would probably be in the starting lineup against the Scrappers.

He said that other players on the squad escaped injury in Tuesday's long scrimmage and would be in shape. Hammons plans to stress pass defense in practice Wednesday and Thursday afternoons.

A number of fans have requested school officials to charter a special train to Nashville.

The train will be chartered if sufficient number of fans appear at the office of Hope Star, Roy Anderson's office or the high school with 55 cents' round-trip fare by 10 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The railroad requires 400 tickets. If enough money is paid by 10 o'clock Thursday the train will be ordered. If not—the money will be refunded to fans.

Officials have put the matter up to the fans. Act now if you desire to see to Nashville on a special train. After 10 o'clock Thursday it will be too late.

To Show Pictures Buried Buildings

Morris to Reveal Advanced Civilization of Bible Times

The advanced civilization of Bible times will be revealed Wednesday night at First Presbyterian church when Dr. John T. Morris will lecture on "Ur of the Chaldees."

Dr. Morris will show pictures of many interesting discoveries by Dr. Woolley of the University of Pennsylvania, which prove the people of that day were highly educated.

Dr. Morris will show photographs of great buildings found covered up in the ground which exhibit proof that builders more than 5,000 years ago knew every great architectural principle known today.

He will give the details of the finding of two colleges of that time with thousands of their books, just as they used them. These books are said to reveal the fact that they were then studying mathematics, grammar and even the literature of centuries before. There will also be pictures of advanced musical instruments and advanced works of art in gold and silver.

Tuesday night, among his pictures of Palestine and fulfilled prophecies, Dr. Morris showed the ruins of Solomon's stables found at Megiddo, where he kept the marvelous number of horses mentioned in the Bible proving the truth of the Bible in that respect.

And also pictures of the cities, Assur, Tyre, Amman, Petra, etc., revealing how that God's warnings and woes upon the ancient cities which failed to obey God's word, have been fulfilled literally, proving that God's word never fails to be carried out, and indicating that God's word will be carried out in the future without failure and with similar exactness, and that some of today who fail to obey the word of God just as it is written will receive literally all the punishment of which they are warned in the Bible.

Everybody is invited to come and see and hear the gripping and educational scene on the "Ur of Chaldees" Wednesday night.

War Operations Moving Swiftly

Japanese Push New Advance—British Besiege Jerusalem

By the Associated Press Japanese troops continued their rapid South China advance Wednesday while British forces started a drive to clear armed Arabs out of Jerusalem. The British cabinet met to consider the Palestine problem, home defense, and other matters.

Nine Arabs were reported killed, and a British soldier and a policeman were killed as the Coldstream Guards sought to oust rebellious Arabs from the Moslem section of Jerusalem's old city.

At the same time Czechoslovakia and Hungary kept heavy troop concentrations facing each other at their borders. France's government faced new labor opposition; and the Spanish insurgents were said to have been repulsed on the Ebro front.

Authoritative sources at Paris reported preliminary negotiations looking toward a "full settlement" of the differences between France and Germany had been started.

Cotton Warehouse Burned at Waldo

Damage Is Estimated at $50,000—900 Bales Cotton Destroyed

WALDO, Ark.—Swiftly spreading fire early Tuesday destroyed the Waldo cotton warehouse, causing damage estimated at $50,000. About 900 bales of cotton were burned in the fire.

Part of the loss was covered by insurance.

The warehouse was owned by bank, ers, merchants and farmers of this area.

Two hundred bales had been loaded on railroad cars Monday and thus were saved.

A sawmill nightwatchman saw the blaze and turned in an alarm. However, the fire spread so quickly that fire fighters had little opportunity to save any part of the warehouse, although the nearby office was saved.

Origin of the fire was not determined.

Refunding Bill to Go on Ballot for Voters' Decision

6-to-1 Verdict Finds Only Justice Humphrey Dissenting

TITLE RULED FAIR

Court Finds It Refers to All 15 Sections of Amendment

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The Arkansas Supreme Court in a six-to-one decision Wednesday denied former Corporation Commissioner C. P. Newton's petition for an injunction barring the proposed highway refunding amendment from the November general election ballot.

Associate Justice T. H. Humphrey was the lone dissenter to the ruling, which means that the people will vote next month on proposed constitutional amendment No. 28, designed to refund the state's 143-million-dollar highway debt.

Newton sought to have the measure barred from the ballot on the ground that its ballot title was insufficient to inform the voters of the full meaning of the proposal.

Associate Justice Frank G. Smith, who wrote the majority opinion, said the amendment consisted of 15 sections, and the ballot title contained a reference to each of them, adding: "It is difficult to see how a ballot title could be more comprehensive."

In the dissenting opinion, Justice Humphrey charged the ballot title was a "snare and trap to deceive the voters." He said the amendment would add millions of dollars to the state's indebtedness; through assumption of improvement district bonds, and would derive the state highways of maintenance funds, and eliminate the turnback fund allocated to the counties for farm-to-market road work.

Rooksbery Ouster Faces U. S. Probe

Miller Discloses Federal Officials Have Asked Explanation

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—W. A. Rooksbery's only comment Wednesday on his replacement as Arkansas director of unemployment compensation was, "It's all a mystery to me." He said he would leave any further comment to Washington officials of the Social Security Board's unemployment compensation division. Officials of the board were making an inquiry Wednesday.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Senator Miller (Dem., Ark.) said Tuesday night federal officials had asked Governor Bailey of Arkansas to "explain" the appointment of Eli W. Collins as state director of unemployment compensation to succeed W. A. Rooksbery.

The senator said the request was forwarded by R. Gordon Wagenet, national director of the unemployment compensation.

Senator Miller added that Wagenet wanted to know why the governor "passed up" four other men eligible for the appointment under state civil service regulations.

Representatives of the Social Security Board said they knew Rooksbery's successor had been named but had not been informed officially.

Rooksbery, here for a conference on unemployment questions did not comment on Collins' appointment.

An international building club will shortly be opened in London's exclusive Park Lane district. It will provide a social rendezvous for architects, estate agents, surveyors, builders, merchants, and others.

The Business of War Goes Deeper Into the Red

The machines which man has devised for killing his fellows in time of war may have reached a frightening peak of efficiency, but war itself remains the most inefficient means of settling disputes ever invented. In fact, "remains" isn't quite the word; war seems to be getting constantly less efficient.

A Washington correspondent for a New York paper recently dug into the records to find out just how the costs of war stand these days, and he made some surprising and morbidly interesting discoveries.

To take the life of one enemy soldier always was an expensive business; but it is getting so much more expensive that one is forced to wonder how a supposedly intelligent race can go on putting up with the institution.

This correspondent compared the expenses of the United States incurred in two wars—the War Between the States, in 1861-65, and the World war in 1917-18.

In the earlier war, the federal army fired some 5,000,000 rounds of ammunition, making casualties out of 340,000 Confederates. During the World war, the British, French and American armies fired upward of 600,000,000 rounds of ammunition, with which they killed 3,400,000 of their enemies. If you will do a little arithmetic, you will see that it takes about 12 times as many rounds of ammunition now to kill a man as it did in the days of the smooth-bore muzzle-loaders.

All of this means a tremendous increase in the cost of running a war. In the Civil War, it cost the northern government approximately $13,800 for each Confederate soldier slain; in the World war, the cost per casualty had jumped to $36,000. In the earlier war, the government spent just a little more than $3,480,000 a day; in the World war, its daily expense ran to more than $38,000,000. In the Civil war, a federal battery fired on an average four rounds per day, from start to finish; in the World war, the average had jumped to 30 rounds per day.

If the institution under consideration were anything but war, a set of figures like these would mean a public scandal—followed by a drastic shakeup. But war, by its very nature, is the most expensive, inefficient, and illogical way possible of settling a dispute.

It kills off a nation's best men and lets its least fit survive. It creates two new quarrels for every one it disposes of. It is disastrous to the winner as well as to the loser. It creates debts that are never paid off and destroys in a year more than can be built up in a generation of peace. It is living and terrible proof that for all his high attainments man is still only a little way out of the jungle.

No need we be surprised to learn that it is steadily getting less and less efficient?

Your Most Valuable Instruments—Your Hands—Are Worth Protection

One of the most astounding mechanisms of which we have any knowledge is the human hand.

The human animal is the only one who uses tools to aid him in his work. He is also the only animal who uses the index finger. He is the only animal in whom there are separate muscles that go only to this finger.

In the development of the human body, the position of the thumb is different from that in other animals, being opposite to the fingers, whereas in other species the thumb is on the same side as the fingers. An animal with the thumb on the same side as the fingers has great trouble in trying to use any tool.

The human hand developed its present flexible form in response to the needs of mankind.

When the anatomy of the human hand is studied, it is found that, first of all, it rests in a certain position—that is, flexed. The resting position is not the best working position. The tendons on the backs of the fingers do not need tendons to control their motion, because the fingers cannot be bent backward. The tendons might, however, slip sideways over the knuckles when the fingers are flexed, were it not for the fact that the tendons on the back of the hand are tied together side by side by bands of tissue.

"This construction of the hand is important in relationship to its ability to function. For that very reason, an injury to the hand is of the utmost importance, because it may interfere with the ability of the individual thereafter to work.

The wear and tear of life exposes the hand in an unusual degree to all sorts of injuries, as well as to infection by bacteria.

Sometimes the hand is infected following injury with a pin or a thorn; sometimes infection occurs after a severe bruise. The structure of the hand gives opportunity for the infection to burrow deeply.

One of the commonest infections of the hands is the formation of pus after an infection in the pulp part of the finger tip. Frequently felons become so serious that they have to be opened by surgery. If the felon penetrates deep enough to involve the bone, the end result may be a shortening of a finger.

An infection around the fingernails is called paronychia, and because it spreads along the line of the nail it is often called a "run-around." Frequently these infections develop after unclean manicuring. Usually if the fingers are soaked for five minutes in very hot water, it becomes possible to push the skin back slightly from the nail and to permit the pus to get out. Soaking of the finger in hot water for a long time will relieve the pain and usually permit healing.

If there is to be any surgical incision—if it becomes necessary, for example, to cut away the tissue so as to get out the nail bed—a surgeon's attention should be had. He can relieve the pain by the use of proper local anesthetics, and he can make certain that operative procedure produces healing and not a further destruction of tissue.

RAISING A FAMILY

Mother Is a Drill Sergeant Who Must Drum Social Poise Into Her "Awkward Squad"

"I want you to be a gentleman," says John's mother. This, she thinks, is enough to give her fourteen-year-old boy all the graces of the drawing room.

Mary of twelve summers she gently admonished this: "Ladies don't lounge that way or yell so loudly."

All this well and good as far as it goes, which isn't far. Mothers overuse the "don't" method, I believe, in training their growing offspring. If they would suggest more positive ideas of correct behavior, these uncertain and often awkward children would grow the pin feathers of assurance and attain the enviable state of "savoir faire," as the French say. Meaning, to know what to do under any circumstances.

There is a party at John's house. He has to show himself, because the place is small and the stairs go right up to the living room. One way would be to tell John to stay at Harry's until the ladies have gone. But this is dodging the issues well as acknowledging that the less seen of John the better.

John would rather stay away, or slip in the back way and nibble nuts in the kitchen, but why should he? He must learn to meet the world under any and every circumstance, if he is to attain sureness. It is four o'clock and bridge is running its third rubber. No time to interrupt, you say.

I think differently. John should be warned that all he needs to do is to enter quietly, look about briefly and say, "Good afternoon, ladies." Those not occupied with playing will not pleasantly. A dummy here and there may reach out and quickly shake hands. There is no need for further talk. He must not be offended if some intent players do not notice him. Then he can immediately mount the stairs or go out. He has conquered an embarrassing situation (for a boy) and next time he will know what to do.

I take only one such incident to illustrate my point. John may have to deliver a message to an important person. He should be told exactly how to act, when to stand and when to sit down. How long to stay, even though Yesterday, Tait began to reorganize the band under his management and the members agree to help him and Myrna to the end.

CHAPTER XV

"I DON'T want to make any promises I can't keep," Tait told "Torchy" Stephens and the band he had gathered inside his apartment. "Before Lud was killed he was riding for another kind of a fall. He was paying your salaries, all right, but it wouldn't have been long before you'd have been out of jobs—because Lud wasn't paying anybody else. I'm going to try to hold off the wolves and get things straightened out, but don't depend on it. It's a gamble, and nothing more. If there's anybody here that doesn't want to stick it out, we want to hear from him now."

"Torchy" spoke up. "I'm sticking. Anybody here want to slide?" The ensuing silence was the answer, and Tait turned to "Torchy" Stephens. "Do you think Pacific Plaza will try to poke a hole in our contract?"

"I believe I can talk them out of it if they do try it," Stephens said. "There's a scandal clause in the contract that they might try to crawl out through—but once I did a favor for Hoskins, the manager, I took over Izzy Pic's band when Izzy got plastered on a night that Hoskins had advertised big."

"Good!" Tait exclaimed. "Then you're the fellow to talk to Hoskins—but only if he brings up the subject. I think the best hunch would be to keep showing up and doing your stuff, as if nothing had happened."

"Sure," said Stephens. "That's what we'll do."

THE next two weeks were hectic ones for Bob Tait. He and Feeley spent days going over the Dombey papers, but there was considerable extraneous stuff and in the end they did little more than establish what Harris Rogers had told Tait in the first place. Ludden Dombey had been head-over-heels in debt. His past included a number of expensive young women. He'd faked his authorship of "The Cat's Meow" and failed to make good, and he'd violated his contract with the phonograph recording company, which had been a good source of revenue.

Feeley was frankly stymied, and was leaning heavily on the existence of the musician who had written "The Cat's Meow." But he hadn't yet been able to find him, though the city had been combed and Feeley had wired his description to every conceivable musicians' union in the country. Leonard Macy, the dilettante and criminologist, had been suspiciously silent—and this worried Feeley more than anything. He knew, for instance, that Macy had several times been in touch with Barkley, the prosecuting attorney. The newspapers, weary of an administration which used the police department as a political football, were pressing Barkley hard. There was more lawbreaking, more crime than ever, and while Feeley was guiltless he was bound as the rest of the department. Barkley wanted a conviction, Feeley knew, and Barkley didn't care much who got convicted. What the detective officer feared was that Macy would spring something suddenly, and make the police detectives a laughing stock. And Barkley would probably encourage him, since he couldn't very well get a conviction until somebody was brought to book with sufficient evidence to justify a trial for the murder of Ludden Dombey.

Tait, too, was painfully aware of the situation, but he had never felt so utterly helpless. There was one bright spot in the outlook: The Swingers were doing well. Under "Torchy" Stephens they were as popular as ever, and nothing was hinted that the Pacific Plaza would try to break the contract. As the new manager, Tait had contacted the majority of more important creditors and convinced a share of them that they still had a chance to get their money. A few nights of pencil scratching told him that if Montgomery would give The Swingers a chance to make some more records, even without Lud Dombey, he could get the corporation on an even keel again. Then Myrna could do as she liked. She could stay with the ship, or she could leave it free of Dombey's debts.

TIME and again Tait found himself hating Dombey for the mess he'd made for Myrna. But then, he told himself, Ludden Dombey hadn't figured on being murdered. Gradually Tait discovered that it wasn't the debts so much which angered him, where Myrna was concerned, as it was the immediate past in Dombey's private life. Tait kept feeling that Lud Dombey had been a rotter to sweep Myrna off her feet without a chance to look at that past. Often, as Bob Tait sat figuring over the Dombey books, he'd be disturbed by the face of Myrna—Myrna's eyes or her moving lips, getting between him and the sheet of paper. Perhaps Leonard Macy was right, and he had fallen in love with her without knowing it.

In the days following his talk with "Torchy" and the band, Tait consciously stayed away from Myrna except when he had to discuss business with her. And he began to resent it a little when she would mention Ludden Dombey in a queer, reserved tone as though she and Lud had held a secret she would share with no one else.

Heavy on Tait's mind had been the fact that Leonard Macy owned a piece of the band. The records showed that he had paid a $1000 for it, probably took it at a time when Lud Dombey needed money badly and had appealed to Macy whom he knew. And on the third week of The Swingers' programs under "Torchy" Stephens he called the band together and asked them to take a temporary cut so that he could make an offer to buy back Macy's interest for what he paid for it. He told them why—and every one of them agreed that under the circumstances Macy should be out.

TAIT took the certified check to Macy's apartment that night. "Bands aren't in your line, Mr. Macy, and I thought you'd be glad to get your money back. I suppose it was merely in the nature of a loan to Dombey."

Tait didn't care for Macy's smile. "On the contrary, Tait. I'm interested in a number of things. Why not a band? I'm perfectly content to retain my share of The Swingers, Incorporated."

"What would make you change your mind?"

"You mean what would I consider a fair return on my investment? Well—you seem to be doing very well with the outfit, Tait. Suppose we said $5000?"

"But that's absurd! Do they owe at least—"

"It was only a suggestion in answer to your question," Macy interrupted. "We can let matters stand. I'm not in the least worried about my $1000."

But Tait was. As he left Macy's apartment he was plenty worried. Plainly, the man wanted a share in the band—and he must have a reason for wanting it. Could it be so that he could maneuver Myrna into a hole?

Champion Cowboy Star Here Circus Day!

Above is pictured Senor Carlos Carreon, worlds champion all around cowboy star who will introduce a series of thrilling achievements in the two performances of Downie Brothers Big 3 Ring Circus, which will exhibit in Hope, on Saturday, October 22, at the Pond Street Show Grounds at 2 and 8 p. m., rain or shine.

Over a score of internationally famous riders, including cowboys, cowgirls, cabarillos, gauchos and an entire tribe of Indians will be presented in collaboration with the greatest popular priced circus on the road today.

Never before in the history of the tented world has such a magnificent array of stupendous features been brought to this section. Never before has such a gorgeous aggregation of colossal stars been gathered together on one program, with over two continuous hours of superb thrills and laughs from an army of 35 funsters.

Among the contingents or top notch artists will be seen several of the former Ringling Bros. Barnum & Bailey Combined Circus features that were with the largest show on earth until it recently terminated its tour for this year at Scranton, Pa., and now will be seen in Hope, on Saturday—among these celebrated artists is "Walter Guice" for many years a favorite of Ringlings—with his company of bare back riders and the funniest troupe of whirl wind acrobatic artists on a novel elevated series of bars; Bert and Corrine, with the novelty aerial contortionistic display; the Great De Aro, world's foremost equilibristic stars; also the sensational "Flying Walters" in death defying mid-air exhibitions that will terrify the weak and thrill the strong, high at the top of the big tent in a series of breath taking somersaults from one trapeze to another, triple and double as well as the "pass over" will be seen for the first time in this city.

A deluge of other favorites gathered from other circuses closed this season will be seen in the second largest big circus in all the world—which is owned and operated by the king of the saw dust and spangled world, Charles Sparks who will personally appear with the circus in Hope, on Saturday.

Mind Is Disciplined.—On the Set A property man on the movie sets must have an eye for the tiniest details, and a mind disciplined to precision. If objects are moved during a take, they must be replaced exactly for the next one, and if a set is unused for several days it must be guarded so that nothing will have been moved when the action is resumed there.

Watching them film "The Shining Court" at Motin, I learn from Hal Sausser that the training of a prop man even dogs his private life.

"Whenever I ask for a second cup of coffee at home," he says, "I notice whether the steam is rising from it as it did from the first one. Even when I take a bite from a piece of bread, I find myself noticing just how big a bite it is."

"When we go out at night, I generally manage to insult my hostess by unconsciously taking a handkerchief and flicking some dust off a table or a piano. And whenever I pick up a book or ash tray or anything, I always put it back exactly as it was. People get to watching me and think I'm sort of screwy."

Movie "Message" Depends On Where It's Shown

Special scenes with altered dialog often are made for insertion in films to be sent to England. Usually this is done for the deletion of words or slang phrases which the British would find chair toward Collier's desk—but the chair is too heavy, and she can't move it. Instead of bringing in a light chair for the scene, a property man ties a rope to one leg of the big one and stands outside camera range, ready to pull. The rope won't show, of course. So the camera begins rolling, and Miss Harvey makes her entrance, and reaches for the chair. Just as she touches it, it begins moving toward the desk. Even the furniture in Hollywood is sensitive to the whims of the stars.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rain! to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sick and the world looks pink. A more bowed movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes three brand, old Calomel Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 25 cents. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

Burning alone with swift, eager fire
That will set hill and field aflame.

And the strewn sliver of the stripped

Martial Law for All of Palestine

Old Section of Jerusalem Still Held by Armed Arab Rebels

JERUSALEM, Palestine — (AP) — A form of martial law to help 20,000 British soldiers crush the uprising of an estimated 10,000 Arabs was proclaimed throughout the Holy Land by Sir Harold MacMichael, commander-in-chief for Palestine, Tuesday night.

Control of the country was placed in the hands of an army backed up by planes, tanks and artillery while rebels clung to the Moslem section of Jeru- salem.

The Palestine police force was placed under the British military com- mand. Inspector General of Police Alan Saunders was placed under the direct orders of Maj. General Robert Haining, commanding British forces.

Despite a formidable display of British armed strength, Arab rebels clung to the Moslem section of Jeru- salem.

The scarred and battle-torn walls of the ancient city were surrounded by platoons of British soldiers, armed with rifles, machine-guns and hand grenades. From within the Moslem section rebel riflemen continued snip- ing. The British guard was doubled to prevent rebel attack on modern dis- tricts of Jerusalem.

Royal Air Force planes flew over the Arab-dominated area but dropped no bombs in fear of damaging the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, and other ancient buildings.

Bodcaw Men Awarded Judgment for Injuries

Varl May and Harry Lambert, both of Bodcaw, were given consent judg- ments in circuit court here Wednes- day in a personal injury suit brought against John W. Tedford.

The case arose from an automobile accident on Highway 4, southeast of Hope. May was awarded judgment of $250 and Lambert judgment of $500.

L. Mitchell of Prescott and E. F. McFadden of Hope represented May and Lambert. Attorney Edwards of Texarkana represented Tedford.

A Book a Day By Bruce Catton

Politics Helped Win the West
Probably no chapter in American history is more dramatic than the struggle to conquer the Pacific north- west. And the historians and the bio- graphers have made the most of it. As a matter of fact, they have almost made too much of it, with the result that the glorifying has obscured much of the real story.

So points out Melvin C. Jacobs, pro- fessor of history at Whitman College, in a book designed especially to cor- rect this perspective, "Winning Ore- gon" (The Caxton Printers, $3). As a background to the whole western ques- tion, economic, social, political, it ought to find a ready place in the research library.

And the book is interesting reading as well. For Mr. Jacobs traces the story of Oregon from the days of the first fur traders and the missionaries with intimate detail down to its final adoption as American territory.

But his real emphasis is upon the forces that eventually won this rich territory where the British were al- ready so deeply entrenched. His con- clusion is that the settlers forced the issue. Flooding the area, they drove out the fur trade and hence the British who had superior claims. At the same time the efforts in Congress of Senator

'I Am' Cult Head Faces Debt Suit

Though he is "the accredited messenger of the ascended masters," and head of the "I Am" cult which has been drawing great crowds in Chicago, Guy W. Ballard, shown above with his wife, Edna, faces suit for $10,900. Summons was served on him just as he was about to address a large meeting of followers. Miss Mary Ingham of Chicago claims Ballard borrowed $8755 from her between 1924 and 1926 when they were drawn together by a mutual interest in occultism. He paid neither interest nor principal, Miss Ingham said.

Lewis F. Linn and President Polk in the interests of "manifest destiny" pushed the campaign to a successful conclusion for the United States.

Thus the saga of the heroic Whit- man and the Spauldings and other missionaries, says Mr. Jacobs, but a story of countless relentless pioneers, and of no end of diplomatic red tape in Washington. And it is still a good story at that.—P. G. F.

They Drilled for Oil —But Struck "Ice"

WALDEN, Colo.—(AP)—Nature has an excellent dry ice refrigerating plant five miles north of here but unless man can rid it of an oily odor he probably won't be able to use it.

An oil company, drilling for oil, struck a carbon dioxide gas field that will flow at the rate of 25,000,000 cubic feet a day. Dry ice is made from the gas. All efforts to rid the well of its oil content have failed and engineers said the oil odor prevents its use com- mercially.

Certificates Are Given to Scouts

Joint Ceremonies Held Monday Night for Men and Boys

Joint ceremonies were held here Monday night in which certificates were presented to 17 leaders who com- pleted the Boy Scout leaders' training school and in which the boys them- selves held a court of honor for dis- trict No. 6, Hempstead county.

The training school was held once each week for six weeks, being in charge of Joe A. Clement of Texar- kana, scout executive of the Caddo council.

Certificates of advancement were presented to three who attained the rank of tenderfoot, five for second class and three for first class. Seven youths received one or more merit badges, while two were advanced to star scout.

Tenderfoot — Neil E. Crow and Charles West, Jr., both of troop 62, Hope; and James Smith Moses, No. 59, Washington.

Second class—John H. Kuesport, and John P. Stinford, both of No. 62, Hope; and Weldon Johnson, Charles W. Dud- ney and John W. Martin, all of No. 59, Washington.

First class—Briant Bundy, No. 68.

He said Schleuter told him of paying $2,000 to an unnamed person in the Curtis-Wright airplane factory in Buffalo, N. Y., for the plans of "some kind of aviation device."

Rumrich also introduced the name of Miss Santa de Wanger, a govern- ment witness.

Halloween Masquerade Ball Is Suggested Here

Boys and girls grow up fast now-days, you know. At least they think so, even if you don't. "Halloween age" boys don't "go for" parties. Just plain old parties are too signified.
But a masquerade ball, now that is different. In fact that's even better than an apron and overall party to most of them. Why? Because it offers them an opportunity to be grown up, dignified.

And because children associate mystery, romance, and thrilling adventure with a masquerade ball. Give a boy his choice of a nice big window to soap or a masquerade ball with his best girl, and see which he takes!
Such an event should be planned as much like a grown up affair as possible. Everyone should come masked, and a grand march, dancing, games and costumes prizes should be arranged.
This kind of entertainment, too, should be under careful adult supervision, but it can be fun for the children, none the less.
A boy can get over the Andy Hardy stage but not around it, and here is a chance to get part of it out of his system.
A campaign for more Halloween parties as an answer to vandalism is being continued by the Division of Recreation of the WPA.
Any persons desiring a program or information for a Halloween party may get such information free at the Recreation Office, Elks building.

Four Former Bobcats to Start Against Northeast Center Team

Hope Prepares for College Grid Game

Starting Lineups of Teams Listed—Kickoff at 8 p. m. Thursday

ARKADELPHIA, Ark.—The Henderson State Teachers College Reddies will play the fourth game of the season Thursday night when they tangle with the L. S. U. Northeast Center of Monroe, La., on the Hope High School field at 8 o'clock. This will be the first college game of the year to be played in Hope.

Four former Hope High School players are expected to be in the starting lineup for Henderson. They are Jack Turner, halfback; R. C. Kennedy, end; Hugh Reese, end; and Freeman Stone, tackle. Rufus Tollett of Nashville will start at fullback.

Coach "Doh" Grow announced Tuesday that he would take his entire squad of 35 men on the trip. A special train carrying students and local football fans will leave Arkadelphia at 5 p. m.

Approximately three teams from the Louisiana school will make the trip, according to Coach Jim Malone. The team which will probably start for Henderson outweights the L. S. U. starters in both line and backfield.

The Reddies boast a line averaging 191 pounds, which compares with 184 for the opponents. The starting backfield for the Arkadelphia eleven tips the scales at 173. The average weight of Louisiana's backfield is 160 pounds.

Hosters of the players who will make the Hope trip have been announced by the athletic departments of both schools. They are as follows:

Arkadelphia: Earl Tatum, guard, 185; Bert Patterson, tackle, 195; Jack Turner, back, 165; Lycester Varnado, back, Norphlet, 170.

Jim Tom Candler, center, Fordyce, 192.

Bob Banks, guard, Carthage, 190; Russell Fack, tackle, Dierks, 190.

R. C. Kennedy, end, Hope, 185; Earl Kessel, tackle, Newkirk, Okla., 196.

Harold Maciejewski, guard, Loup City, Neb., 190.

Floyd Sturgis, back, Arkadelphia, 170.

Jack Roy, guard, Loup City, Neb., 170.

Herbert Moreland, guard, Hot Springs, 190.

Tip King, quarterback, Snackover, 165.

Pryor Reynolds, back, Abilene, Tex., 160.

Rufus Tollett, fullback, Nashville, 185.

Hugh Reese, end, Hope, 180.

Buddy Parker, quarterback, Benton, 170.

Percy Ramsey, end, Hope, 192.

Freeman Stone, tackle, Hope, 205.

Udell Bruce, end, Gordon, Neb., 205.

Northeast Center Stars

In New York

By George Ross

NEW YORK—The dictators are having their way with things in Europe, usurping whatever territorial stakes they happen to claim, and living the life of the Riley.

Meanwhile an ex-dictatorial figure stalks through New York and his every day pursuits, unmoved by what happens on the front pages.

He is none other than Gerardo Machado, former Iron Man of Cuba, who escaped from the hot little island in the dead of a violent night, in order to save his life at the height of a revolt.

Ex-Iron Man Machado, an elderly, bony, swarthy-skinned man with steely eyes, a scrubby grey moustache and a won expression, has resided in New York for several years, in spirit, too. Yet he is a frequent visitor at the Stork Club, where he prelates an inconspicuous corner from which to watch the couples on the dance floor.

Hovering near him always are two hulking "companions," for Machado did not depart Cuba as a popular idol. By the way of vicarious fulfillment of nostalgia, this going exile gets around to Manhattan's rhumba dens once or twice a week and, with four vigilant eyes ever on him, he even has ventured out to dance.

The reports are that he is well-heeled in millionaire style and that he lives amidst lavish surroundings. We saw him in the Stork at about the time Hitler was storming into Suden zones. The conversation all around him dealt with that subject. Cuba's former Iron Man listened indifferently, however, to talk about the totalitarians who rule as he once did.

Grounds for Assault

Henny Youngman reports on the panhandler who approached him on 45th St. and asked for 11 cents. "For a cuppa coffee," he gave as the usual explanation. "Eleven cents?" bellowed Youngman. "Why, coffee shouldn't cost more than a dime!"

"Yeah," replied the beggar. "But I gotta take care of my agent's 10 per cent."

Notre Dame Again Climbs to Front

Fighting Irish Believed on Road to National Leadership

SOUTH BEND, Ind.—(AP)—Irish eyes are smiling at Notre Dame.

For the fighting Irish apparently "have it" this season. Both on and off the campus the belief prevails that Notre Dame's football fortunes are on the road back to national leadership.

The road ahead is rocky enough to enforce a "detour" or two before the current campaign ends, but the idea is widespread that Coach Elmer Layden is heading toward the heights the Irish once occupied in the days of the great Knute Rockne.

In three starts this season, Notre Dame has defeated Kansas 52 to 0; Georgia Tech 14 to 6 and Illinois 14 to 6. The manner in which the Irish accomplished these triumphs, however, is more impressive than the scores.

For the first time in several seasons, Notre Dame has topnotch backfield material—including several sons of old Erin.

No great Notre Dame team lacked a fine left halfback, and this year's youths for that position. Harry Stevenson is a fine kicker, runner and passer.

Bob Saggau, as a sophomore, gives promise of developing into a great runner. Ben Sheridan, with one more season to go, has stamped himself as one of the most elusive speedsters to wear the Irish uniform in many campaigns.

Rockne's undefeated team of 1930 numbered such Irish greats as Frank Carden, Marty Brill, Marcy Schartz and Joe Savoldi. This year's aggregation still is a long way from measuring up to the 1930 team, but even Layden will admit it has "possibilities."

"Fairly good," grinned the Irish coach after the Illinois victory, "but they need sandpapering."

That just about sizes up the Notre Dame situation. Potentially, this year's team is the best since 1930. But experience—there were several costly fumbles against Illinois—may cost the Irish victories in a schedule which perhaps ranks as the hardest taken on by any major eleven: Carnegie Tech next Saturday, followed by Army, Navy, Minnesota, Northwestern and Southern California.

How to See Football

The 7-2-2 Defense
By JERRY BRONFIELD
NEA Service Sports Writer

A team that has no particular fear of its opponent's passing attack may use a 7-2-2 with very good effect. This set-up employs a seven-man line and a boxed backfield, with two backs a couple of yards behind scrimmage to the rear of the tackles, and the other two in the same approximate position about 10 yards to the rear.

This goes a long way toward stopping a strong running game, and if the defending backs are fast, they can cover plenty of territory against passes.

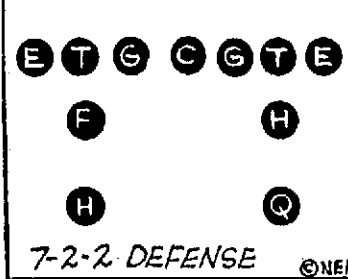

A good spot for this set-up is when the attacking team is knocking at the goal-line, from anywhere within the 10-yard stripe, where the defense must be as closely-knit as possible, and yet flexible enough to guard against the danger of passes over the line.

The two defending backs up close must stop any running play which breaks through, in addition to helping cut against passes, particularly laterals, or forwards into the flat.

The last two defenders must watch the aerials over the goal, yet be ready to come up fast to stop any ground play which looks as though it has gone too far.

NEXT: The 5-3-3 defense.

Apple Butter
Hempstead county casing budgets are not complete until some jars of apple butter take their place on the shelf.

From early New England colonial days in this country, making apple butter has been one of the most popular methods of preserving apples. In the first place, it is a way of utilizing apples which will not keep long and cannot be used in other ways, and hence it is a matter of economy to preserve the min this way. Miss Gertrude E. Conant, extension nutritionist, University of Arkansas College of agriculture, points out.

Many recipes for making apple butter have been handed down from mother to daughter since the early days. But most of these more than century-old recipes take too long to prepare. Miss Conant suggests a "new fashioned" recipe.

Wash the apples and cut in quarters, removing any bruised or discolored portions. Place in a steam pressure cooker, adding one pint water to each gallon of apples. Cook under 5 pound pressure for 15 minutes. Release the pressure, drain off the excess juice for jelly; then rub the pulp through a colander to remove skins, seeds and cores.

To each quart of apple pulp, add one dozen red-hot cinnamon drops and two cups of sugar. Stir until the candy and sugar have dissolved, spread the pulp in shallow enameled pans, and place in the oven for about 45 minutes. The oven should be kept at about 225 degrees F. It should be stirred occasionally to prevent burning. When the desired consistency is reached, the butter should be packed in sterilized pint jars, sealed, and processed 15 minutes in boiling water.

Their money must have been on the greyhound out in front, as this picture of Catherine Marvis, Hollywood dancer, and Leo Gorcey, oldest of the movie "Dead End" kids, was taken at the Culver City dog track. Or maybe it's love, since it is reported that Miss Marvis is engaged to marry Gorcey. She is from Atlanta. He rose to fame and the movies from New York tenement districts.

Electric Appliances
Hempstead county rural families who have recently purchased electrical equipment are discovering that their appliances are no better than the cord. Instructions concerning the selection and care of cords have recently been received at the home demonstration agent's office from Earl L. Arnold, Extension Agricultural Engineer, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

Mr. Arnold compares the cord on an electric appliance to a "lifeline" through which the energy that operates the appliance passes. The appliance cannot operate properly unless this "lifeline" allows the electricity to reach the appliance safely at its full voltage.

The usual appliance cord consists of two small stranded copper wires insulated from each other and from things around them. High quality cords have a label attached to them indicating approval by the National Board of Fire Underwriters. This should be one of the guides to look for when new cords are bought. Rayon covered cords should always be avoided. They are made to look at, not to use, the engineer advises.

If a cord is to give good service, it must be handled carefully. Pinching the cord may break the insulating material. Bending or twisting sharply, or continual bending at one place will eventually break some of the wires, crack the insulation, and possibly be the cause of fire. When it is necessary to replace a plug on the end of a cord, the end of the outer coverings should be fastened with string or tape to keep it from fraying. When the outer surface of a cord becomes frayed or cracked, the cord should be immediately replaced by a new one, Mr. Arnold said.

The Free City of Danzig, which is now under pressure from the Nazis, was formerly a part of Germany. It was made a free city under the supervision of the League of Nations after the World War.

The triumph of the New York Yankees over the Chicago Cubs in the World Series gave the New Yorkers the distinction of being the first club ever to win the championship.

Winter Legumes
Winter legumes grown on 3650 acres in Hempstead county in the winter of 1937-38 and plowed under this spring were worth more than $15,900 in the form of nitrogen taken up through the roots of the legumes from the soil air, according to information just received from Charles F. Simmons, Extension Agronomist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

With every acre of legumes turned under, about 45 pounds of nitrogen was made available to the next crop, which is equivalent to 300 pounds of nitrate of soda. The value of the legumes for nitrogen alone is about $6 an acre when compared with nitrate of soda selling at $40 a ton, Mr. Simmons said.

In addition to their value for nitrogen, winter legumes use large quantities of plant food from the soil, which would have been leached out by winter rains. When the legumes are plowed under, this plant food that had been stored up in the legumes is made available to the succeeding crop. Mr. Simmons pointed out. Winter legumes also help to prevent erosion.

Conditions at present, the agronomist said, indicate that the winter legume acreage this fall will exceed that of the past year in spite of the extremely dry fall, which has delayed planting. Vetch, Austrian peas, crimson and bur clover, all of which are adapted to Arkansas soil conditions should be planted just as soon as weather conditions make it advisable. It is best not to plant any of these crops during hot, dry weather, especially if these are inoculated, because of possible injury to the inoculant.

Winter legumes may be used toward fulfilling the soilbuilding allowance on the farm, Mr. Simmons said. Payments for legumes under the AAA program is at the rate of $1.50 an acre.

The following winter legume varieties are recommended for this county: Hairy vetch, Bur clover and hop clover.

So They Say
The dictators are now in the limelight, but they are in the light of a setting sun.—Mayor La Guardia of New York.

In the place of covenants and collective security to buttress British and the empire, we are left with two promises, one from Mussolini and one from Hitler.—Major Clement R. Atlee, labor opposition leader in the House of Commons.

What is the matter with some women? They pull out their eyebrows and, not content with that, they then destroy our bird life for a whim.—Dr. J. W. McKinley, speaking to the Field Naturalists' Club in Toronto, on feathered hats.

If I read the signs of the times aright, public regulation of private enterprise is not going to be suspended. Times have changed too much, thought has changed too much, and desires of men have changed too much.—Winthrop M. Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank of New York.

There simply isn't any land where he said he saw it.—Commander Isaac Schlossbach, back from Arctic exploration, on Peary's discovery of "Crock-erland."

This country must have a moral transformation.—Premier Daladier of France.

We should abolish the causes of war, and one of the great causes is poverty.—Lord Strabolgi of Britain's House of Lords.

While the physical sciences are learning the secrets of atoms and stars, the economists, politicians, and governments are chopping flints in a Stone Age sociology.—Dr. Matthew Luckiesh, industrial research director.

The Library
The following is a synopsis of one of the most interesting books in the library: "The American Flag," by Kathleen Norris.

The Faggs were more than a family, they were an institution. Rich in tradition, strongly united, they formed an alliance against the world, and from their satisfied point of view, Penelope was an outsider.

She was a Fitzpercy. The Fitzpercys lived a casual, bohemian life, in their little cottage, and it was always a question as to where their next penny was coming from. Yet it was with the golden Penelope that young Jeff Fagg fell in love.

None of the Faggs wanted Jeff to marry Penelope and Penelope made it quite clear that her first glimpse of the Faggs frightened her, and that though she liked Jeff she did not love him.

But Jeff and Penelope were married in a strange ceremony, which took place only because doctors had given up hope of the bridegroom's recovery from an accident, and the Faggs insisted that their son's last wish should be fulfilled. But Jeff did not die, and a loyal girl found

Play Stellar Roles as Spy Drama Unfolds in Court

IN HIGH GOOD SPIRITS was red-headed Johanna Hoffmann, above, as she went on trial in New York Federal Court with three other defendants as alleged members of a Nazi spy ring. A native of Dresden, she was arrested while working as a hairdresser on the German liner Europe, and was charged with carrying messages for the ring.
